3. Read the following passage carefully: (5 marks)

Buddha found that all men are unhappy—rich or poor. Wealth brings comfort, a fleeting fancy of joy, but no real happiness. While he was in this mood, he came across one of the saints who still performed penance far from the crowd. A passionate desire to do likewise took hold of Gautama. Just then the news was brought to him of his first born son. 'This is another tie to break', said Gautama. He felt like a man whose house is on fire. At night he awoke in a great agony of spirit, went into the bright moonshine; mounted his horse and rode off into the wood. He met a holy hermit in the Vindhya mountains and talked to him but he was not satisfied. Then he went to the jungle with five disciples and there he gave himself up to fasting and penance. But it brought him no sense of truth. Then he gave up fasting and began to feed himself fully. He realised that truth may be reached best by nourished brain in a healthy body.

SUMMATIVE ASSESSMENT

On the basis of the reading of the passage, answer the questions in brief:

1. What was Buddha's opinion about wealth?

2. Read the following passage carefully: (5 marks)

As day-light can be seen through very small holes, so little things will illustrate a person's character. Indeed character consists in little acts well and honourably performed; daily life being the quarry from which we build it up and rough-hew the habits which form it. One of the most marked tests of character is the manner in which we conduct ourselves towards others. A graceful behaviour towards superiors, inferiors and equals is a constant source of pleasure. It pleases others because it indicates respect for their personality, but it gives tenfold more pleasure to ourselves. Every man may, to a large extent, be a self-educator in good behaviour as in everything else; he can be civil and kind if he will, though he has not a penny in his purse. Gentleness in society is like the silent influence of light which gives colour to all nature; it is far more powerful than loudness or force and far more fruitful.

SUMMATIVE ASSESSMENT

Now complete the following sentences:

1. Character consists in ..... .
2. The constant source of pleasure is ..... .
3. Graceful behaviour pleases both the parties — he who shows the good behaviour and he to whom ..... .
4. As light gives colour to all nature, so ..... .
5. The word in the passage that means 'to show' is ..... .
